The Associate Research Fellowship were established in 2015 to support a dynamic research environment within St Hilda’s College through facilitating collaboration and innovation, and to enhance the academic life and work of mid-career academics in Oxford through providing a chance to be part of the unique interdisciplinary environment of a college.

These fellowships are designed primarily for those with departmental lectureships or research posts of equivalent responsibility within the University, who do not have a college association.

Associate Research Fellows will receive rights to free weekday lunches at St Hilda’s and the right to take other meals at their own expense. They will be members of the College Senior Common Room. They would be expected to contribute to college life as, for example, graduate advisors.

Criteria for appointment as a St Hilda’s Associate Research Fellow:

a. The strong support of a current St Hilda’s College Fellow
b. An international research profile that indicates the potential to contribute to an area of college research (with an indication of how they see that contribution being made)
d. An understanding of general college life and how they may contribute to it
e. A commitment to encouraging and supporting the research activities of research students and colleagues

The College anticipates appointing up to two ARF this year, for two years initially, extendable to five years in total. Fellowships will be renewable against criteria based on their contributions to the research life of the College.

Applications for an ARF post, covering the criteria listed above, a full CV and written support from a College Fellow, should be lodged by November 10, 2017, with the PA to the Principal, Joanna Burnett, St Hilda’s College, Oxford OX4 1DY (principal.pa@st-hildas.ox.ac.uk). As the strong support of a current Fellow is a key criterion for appointment, it is important that applicants have previously discussed clear areas of collaboration, or the contribution they might make to the College, with appropriate academic staff at St Hilda’s. A list of these staff is available at: http://www.st-hildas.ox.ac.uk/content/academic-staff